

GEORGE III CHIPPENDALE PERIOD MAHOGANY SIDE TABLE - REF 2197

A superb and simply elegant George III mahogany side table possibly by Thomas Chippendale or Wright and Elwick of Wakefield. The well figured rectangular top with applied moulded edge, below a single long, oak lined, cock-beaded drawer to the front, fitted with original rococo style gilt brass handles of a time often used by Thomas Chippendale. The lower part of the frieze with a crisply carved chained beaded edge to three sides. The table is supported by square section tapering legs, with C-scroll brackets to the hips and square section block feet. Of superb quality throughout, a fact which enhances the tables, simple and elegant lines.

Thomas Chippendale's workshop was producing contemporarily with Wright and Elwicks in Wakefield in the mid 18th century. At this period they both produced furniture of a similar inspiration and design. On this piece the high quality and elegant design shines through. It is highly likely that it is from the workshops of one of these fine makers.
